

Title: Students Learn of Their Legacy
 Author: Kyle Leber - Staff Reporter
 Size: 42.78 square inch
 Canistota, SD Circulation: 550

Students Learn of Their Legacy

Kyle Leber - Staff Reporter

Ben D. Anderson addresses the Canistota student body about the importance of thinking of the legacy they will leave behind. Anderson placed importance on the idea of a "No Bullying" policy and why the students should follow the policy

The Canistota High School got the privilege of have a guest speaker in the morning with a very important message. This guest speaker talked about discrimination, getting an education, and his life story.

Ben D. Anderson was born with cerebral palsy, and was sent to a private school at a young age. Ben was misdiagnosed with an IQ in the 60's, and later found out there had been a mistake.

When he graduated high school, he decided to further his education, and now has a Bachelor's degree of Science in Vocational Rehabilitation.

In the spring of 1978, Ben's company Break Through, Inc. started to grow. Ben D. Anderson has written a few books which include "Break Through" , "IQ of 63, So What!" , and "Last One Picked, So What!". Ben has spoken in 18 states, and is still presenting. At the end of his presentation, Ben was asked what his greatest accomplishment was. His response was "Marrying my wife".

This guy gave us one great presentation and great moral. Quit bullying!